Flooding and Drainage: The developer advises the subdivision is not subject to any known flooding or drainage problems. Christopher G. Langham, P.E. with The WLB Group, in a letter dated November 13 2014, cites the following, in part: A hydrology report was reviewed and approved by the Town of Oro Valley, which determined the flood prone limits of the 100-year storm. The subdivision was designed in accordance with applicable Town of Oro Valley Standards. As a result of the design, the improvements were constructed in accordance with approved plans and specifications, and each lot was provided a building site in which there were no drainage hazards from the 100-year storm. The subdivision is located within a FEMA Clear Zone "X" of FIRM panel 04019C1080L, Effective: June 16, 2011. The Zone "X" is defined as areas determined to be located outside the 500-year floodplain. It is our understanding that flood insurance may not be required by FEMA for a Zone "X" designation, but may be required by public or private lending institutions or other parties.

Soils: In a Geotechnical Evaluation Summary by Western Technologies, Inc. dated February 13, 2001 it states in part: The ground surface was hilly, boulder with rock outcrops and contained a sparse to moderate growth of saquaro, cholla, mesquite trees, palo verde, ocotillo, prickly pear and desert brush. Site drainage was sheet surface flow to arroyos crossing the site. As presented on Logs of Test Pits, surface soils to depths of one to two feet were found to be Silty Sands of nil plasticity. The materials underlying the surface soils and extending to the full depth of exploration consisted of moderately to highly weathered, hard, to very hard rock. Groundwater was not encountered in any test pit at the time of exploration. Field seismic data indicated soil and/or weathered rock which became less weathered with depth. Near surface soils are non-plastic and exhibit low expansion potential when recompacted, confined by loads approximating floor loads and saturated. Slabs-on-grade supported on recompacted native soils have a low potential for heaving if the water content of the soil increases.

Adjacent Lands and Vicinity: 1 acre residential and medium density residential, up to 4 units per acre, 1 house per 5 acre suburban ranch. High density residential retirement community. Subdividers advise purchasers that the subdivision is located within open desert area that includes washes/creek beds; mountainous terrain; plants, insects and wildlife indigenous to a desert environment, some or all of which may be considered potential safety hazards to unsupervised children and adults.
